The Funeral of Capt. John Wilson.

The funeral obsequies over all that remains on earth of the gallant and lamented Captain of the ill-fated steamer Lady Elgin, were held in Chicago at the Wigwam, on Sunday evening last, at 6 o'clock. That capacious Hall, which was selected for the mournful occasion because of its great capacity, was crowded in its every part with citizens

At a little before 6 o'clock the coffin was brought in, followed by a numerous procession of the Masonic Fraternity, and placed in front of the pulpit, upon a stand covered by the American flag. The coffin is a metallic one, and upon it, on a silver plate, is this simple inscription:

CAPT. JOHN WILSON,
DIED SEPT. 8, 1860.

The services were opened by a prayer by the Rev. Dr. CLARKSON, of St. James Church; and the Rev. Mr. PRATT, of Trinity Church, then delivered a most feeling and appropriate discourse. He reviewed the melancholy and thrilling circumstances of the late calamity, and illustrated the manly, self-sacrificing and generous qualities of character of the deceased, by alluding, in the most affectionate terms, to his noble conduct on the occasion of the late wreck, when in his heroic efforts to encourage and save others, he sacrificed his own life, dying nobly at his post of duty, and while, coupled with the prayers for their own deliverance, of those struggling in the angry waters around him, was an invocation to God to "bless Capt. WILSON," who had done so much, in that terrible time, to cheer and save them. The Rev. speaker paid a most beautiful and eloquent tribute to the excellencies of character for which the deceased was so universally admired while living, and commended to the vast audience before him an example so manful and faithful—especially that noble quality of his character which was so strikingly illustrated in his refusal to desert his post of duty in the hour of peril and trial, though by doing so he could have saved his own life. The Rev. speaker expressed cordial sympathy for the widow and children who have been so mournfully bereaved in the death of such a true and noble husband and father, and concluded by suggesting that those who admire true heroism and faithful manhood, ought to rear a monumental testimonial over his grave. The discourse throughout was feelingly eloquent and appropriate for so solemn an occasion, and the high eulogy pronounced upon the lamented deceased; as all who knew him when living would testify, was as well deserved as any praise that has ever been expressed by human lips.

Rev. Dr. CLARKSON followed in a few brief and eloquently appropriate remarks, and the services were closed by a prayer by Rev. Mr. PRATT. The pall bearers then transferred the coffin to the hearse, which, preceded by the Light Guard Band, who played a solemn dirge, and by a long procession of Masons in regalia, and followed by Master Masons, also in regalia, and by a long procession of our marine and shipping men and citizens on foot and in carriages, then proceeded, in the midst of the vast throng of people crowding the streets and following along, up through Market to Randolph street, down Randolph to Clark street, down Clark to Van Buren street, and up Van Buren street to the depot of the Michigan Southern R. R., where the train that was to bear the remains away were waiting. The coffin was boxed up, placed in a baggage car, and taken in charge by Messrs. R. F. MOCKRIDGE and D. S. HARRINGTON, the committee from Coldwater, Michigan, where Captain WILSON resided, and where his remains will be interred, as soon as his wife arrives, she having been on a visit at the Sault at the time of the late disaster, and being expected to reach Coldwater by way of Detroit, that evening.

It was a solemn funeral, and the solemnity of the occasion pervaded all hearts. All felt that a truly noble man had been removed from the land of the living, and all mingle their sympathies with the deep and untold grief of those who loved him and whose hearts are filled with anguish over his melancholy fate.

In this connection a correspondent of the Buffalo Commercial Advertiser says:

"On a recent tour to Lake Superior, the writer of this had the pleasure of spending a week with the family of the brave and generous hearted Capt. Jack Wilson, who have been spending the summer at Sault Ste Marie A noble woman well worthy of such a husband, the whole family well deserve the sympathies of the whole Christian world. He leaves three children—the eldest a modest, amiable and noble girl of fifteen years, in size, appearance and accomplishments indicating a young lady of seventeen years; the next, a fine boy of thirteen years; the youngest, a pretty, bright girl of eleven years, but an unfortunate invalid, who will remain so through life. The appearance, manners and accomplishments of each, give unmistakable evidence of the successful training of a sterling mother.

Mrs. Wilson usually makes two or three round trips each season with her husband Less than two weeks since, the writer accompanied her on board the unfortunate Lady Elgin, on a trip from the Sault to the end of her usual route on Lake Superior, intending to return and stay at the Sault a few weeks longer before going to their home at Coldwater, Michigan. They left with buoyant hearts, little thinking that it to be the last trip they would ever take with the generous hearted husband and father. He, in giving the parting hand, said: "I will see you in Buffalo in a few months." How sad his fate. How gloomy the hours of his family. What will generous Buffalo do for them?—None more deserving, and now is the time to soothe the aching heart with the substantial assurance that the family will be placed beyond want, and the children well educated.

Buffalo, Sept. 13, '60. L."

BRIGGS IN THE FIELD FOR LINCOLN AND HAMLIN.—The New York Evening Post says that an excitement was created in the Eighth Assembly District on Friday evening by the accession of ex-Alderman JOHN H. BRIGGS to the Presidency of the Republican Campaign Club, in that election district. Mr. BRIGGS did not find the Bell-Everett concern the thing to suit him, and has come out square for LINCOLN and HAMLIN.

MR. CHAS. ROEMIG was appointed one of the Marshals of the day for the DOUGLAS worshipping pow-wow, in Rock Island, Ill., but having concluded to vote for LINCOLN and HAMLIN respectfully declined the honor (?) of serving.

In Common Council—The Adjournment Dodge.

On Monday night, Councillor LOCKWOOD introduced his "Investigating Resolution" in the Board, and proceeded to give his reasons for asking for the appointment of the Committee. He claimed that they had not done their duty in investigating into the several Ward accounts, &c., &c.,—while at the same time he would give the Committee credit for doing a large amount of labor, if not of doing their duty, in the First Ward, as they had examined 22 witnesses in matters connected with that Ward, while in the following eight Wards only five witnesses had been examined. That they had stated in their report that there were only "three contracts on file in the Comptroller's office for work to be done in the First Ward for 1859." Here the Councillor read a certificate from the Comptroller stating that there were 25 contracts on file, instead of three.

The Committee, he said, had not followed up the investigation into School matters as they ought; that there had been paid some $1,100 more for wood in 1859 for the Seventh Ward School than had actually been consumed. But the Committee failed to trace it to the parties who were guilty. The Seventh Ward had expended over $15,000 in 1859, and not a witness had been examined. Again, the Committee remarked in their report on the Seventh Ward, that the investigation into Ward matters more properly belonged to the Aldermen and Councillors of the Wards, and that they would leave the matter for the Council to dispose of as they saw fit. The resolution creating the Committee (said the Councillor) makes it their special duty to look into Ward affairs.

Councillor MARLON here stated that he was very much surprised that M. LOCKWOOD would be so bold as to ask to have himself put on a new Committee, and he would decidedly object to the whole thing

Councillor ROSEBECK—Mr. President, we have heard enough of these committees; we all know that Mr. LOCKWOOD is a pet of the newspapers. He comes in here in a lordly manner and introduces resolutions, and the newspapers make a great noise over them; while other members are not noticed.

Councillors JOHNSTON, GREULICH and BUENING spoke in opposition; but all further debate was systematically knocked in the head by Councillor ROSEBECK moving to adjourn.

THE FRUITS OF PERSEVERANCE—THE PLYMOUTH MISSION CHURCH.—Last spring, CALEB WALL, in his annual pronunciamento, said there was no church in the First Ward. CALEB furthermore resolved to have one there. He stimulated the friends of religion, and an effort was put forth. The Congregational Church (Rev. Mr. HELMER'S) took the matter in hand, and before long the lots were bargained for, and now, on the corner of Lynde and Astor streets, is as pretty a church edifice as a lover of the comely could wish to see. The carpenters are still at work on it, but it will be finished and ready for occupancy by the second Sunday in October.

The cost of the ground and edifice will be somewhere in the neighborhood of $3,000. A greater portion of this sum has already been realized through the exertions of the members and of the pastor Plymouth Church, but there is still a balance left, and now the friends of the mission propose to give, on Tuesday night of next week, a concert to liquidate this debt. This concert is to be given in the Church by the ladies of Milwaukee, assisted by such excellent talent as Mr. WEINBERG, Mr. HEMPSTED and others. We don't wish to mention the names of any of the ladies, but we assure our readers the amateur talent is by no means insignificant, and the pains which have been taken to perfect the entertainment and render it worthy of the occasion, is a guaranty that the occasion will be a perfect success.

WISCONSIN AGRICULTURAL AND MECHANICAL ASSOCIATION.—The arrangements for the exhibition of horses by this Association, commencing October 2, are making rapid progress towards completion; and from what we learn, we have no doubt a very creditable affair will then come off. The Executive Committee have decided to issue family tickets for $8, which will admit a person with his family and a carriage during the continuance of the Fair.

WARD'S STEAM ICE CAR, LADY FRANKLIN, is to be exhibited at the State Fair, with a steam Calliope attached. It will make the great attraction at the Fair, and thousands will undoubtedly attend expressly to see this veritable wonder of the nineteenth century, to hear the steam music and see the "machine" that produces "Hail Columbia," and the "Arkansaw Traveler" by steam.

SHEEP FROM MICHIGAN.—Large numbers of sheep are arriving here daily by the Detroit & Milwaukee Railway, en route for the interior of this State and Minnesota. Monday the steamship Detroit landed 300, yesterday 700, and the Milwaukee 500—in all 1,500 in two days. This looks as if our farmers were going to devote more attention to sheep raising than heretofore.

THE OFFICERS of the several companies composing the Milwaukee Fire Department, will meet at the house of Engine Co. No. 2, on Wednesday evening, Sept 19, at half past seven o'clock. A full attendance is requested, as business of importance will come before them.

CALEB WALL, the City Auctioneer and Land Agent, wants to purchase two dwelling houses and lots. He also advertises to sell this morning two very superior pianos, some good furniture, desk, superior carpets, and fifty barrels of apples. Read his advertisements on the subject.

Wisconsin State Sunday School Convention—First Day.

The Convention assembled at three o'clock in the basement of the Plymouth Church.

Over a hundred Delegates being present, a large number of whom were ladies, JAMES HALL, of Oconomowoc, was called to the chair, and ISAAC P. ROGERS, elected Secretary.

Mr. HALL, on taking the chair announced that the Convention would be called to order by the singing of a hymn

Prayer was then offered by the Rev. Mr. CAMP.

Rev. Mr. HELMER shortly after welcomed the Convention on behalf of Milwaukee and the church He said:

Friends and Patrons of Sabbath Schools, I give you welcome. If you had assembled here to-day to discuss questions of science or the advancement of any department of trade, you would be entitled to consideration; but the higher and holier objects which brought you together are of far greater consideration: you have come here to effect the foundation of society. You are to sweeten the bitter waters, and therefore you are to be welcomed heartily by all who have the cause of Christianity at heart.

Mr. HELMER then refered to the specialite of their mission, and illustrated the nature of the Sunday School teacher's duties by reference to wet land, which needed underdraining before it could be reclaimed.

Such, he said, is the object of Sabbath Schools, that the earth may bring forth right cousness gloriously.

In olden times they held councils to settle questions of dogmatical interest, but you come together to discuss questions which shall guide the young heart up to manhood aright. Cordially, therefore, do we welcome you to the good work, and to the hospitality which I am sure is open to you.

Mr. HELMER closed by stating that morning prayer meetings were held daily in the Church, and invited all to attend.

Mr. CHIDLOW, of Cincinnati, Ohio, responded briefly, saying:

I rise, Mr. Chairman, to give utterance to the feelings of my heart, after hearing the warm welcome which has been extended to us by our brother. I am here from the great State of Ohio, and I am rejoiced that in this prosperous young State, in this beautiful Lake city, I am once more able to meet with the friends of Sabbath Schools. I recognize in this convention the great work of christianity, which is the same every where.

Mr. CHIDLOW referred to the conventions which had been held in his own State, one of which had been presided over by an eminent jurist, and spoke of the good results which has attended them, and how young men who had lingered about the doors of the sanctuary had witnessed the unanimity of the servants of God; had seen that they were all animated with a lofty ambition to benefit the race, and had been induced to enter and take an active part in the work.

At the conclusion of Mr. CHIDLOW'S remarks, Mr. JOS. HAMILTON, of Milwaukee, moved that a committee of three be appointed to nominate permanent officers of the Convention, which motion was adopted; and Messrs. HAMILTON, BURNELL and MARSH were appointed such committee by the Chair.

Mr. SAMUELS moved the appointment of the following named gentlemen as business committee: G. W. Stowart, W. W. Jones, S. J. Wright, K. A. Burnell, G. Tracy, Joseph Hamilton, Dr. Kindell, H. C. Mowry. This was adopted.

On motion, Mr. SAMUELS was afterwards added as Chairman of the Committee.

While the committees were out, the Convention sung, in a fervid manner, the following beautiful hymn:

Must Jesus bear the cross alone,
And all the world go free?
No! there's a cross for every one,
And there's a cross for me!

How happy are the Saints above,
Who once went sorrowing here;
But now they taste unmingled love,
And joy without a tear.

The consecrated cross I'll bear
Till death doth set me free;
And then go home my crown to wear,
For there's a crown for me.

The committee having entered, the following nominations were read and the officers elected unanimously:

For President—WM. H. BYRON, of Milwaukee.

For Vice Presidents—A. B. Knapp, Oshkosh; J. Lewis, Milwaukee; J. W. Vail, Arena; W. P. Lynde, Milwaukee; J. A. Hall, Watertown; W. H. Wilcox, Beloit; Rev. J. V. Preston, Berlin; Rev. C. T. Tucker, Ripon; Wm. Bone, Kenosha; Dr. C. Crandall, Fond du Lac; G. H. Stewart, Beaver Dam; S. B. Peck, Racine.

Secretaries—I. P. Rogers, L. M Marsh; Dr. D. W. Perkins.

The President (Mr. BYRON) on taking the chair, said:

Brothers and Sisters—I feel truly gratified for this high honor which you have conferred upon me of presiding over a body of men and women engaged in this great work. When I consider the weight of responsibility, when I remember that THEODORE FRELINGHEYSEN once said he was doing much more for his country when laboring in the Sabbath School than when on the floor of the Senate. I feel deeply the honor which attaches to this position and to the calling of all of us; but I am overwhelmed by the responsibility. Brothers, I throw myself on your kindness and co operation, but I depend more and more on the fervor and warmth of your prayers, assured that we shall receive aid from on high, and that the State will have abundant reason to feel thankful we assembled here.

The Business Committee then read the order of exercises for the evening, which were adopted by the Convention, after which Mr. HAMILTON stated that the Executive Committee had corresponded with several gentlemen prominent in the cause of Sunday Schools, who, it was expected, would be present. He had written to RALPH WELLS three times but business had prevented his attending the Convention. Mr. WOODRUFF was probably now on the way. I received, (he said) to-day the following letter from Mr. BURTIS, which I will read.

ASSOCIATE SECRETARY'S OFFICE,
New York, 509 Broadway, Sept. 14th, 1860.

To Joseph Hamilton, Esq, Secretary of the Milwaukee Sunday School Union:

DEAR BROTHER:—Your cordial invitation in behalf of your Committee of Arrangements, to be present at your State Sunday School Convention, about to be held, is at hand. Allow me to present your committee my deep obligations for their consideration, at the same time expressing my extreme regret that my official duties compel me to decline. My heart not only, but the hearts of all earnest Sabbath School workers, are with you in your efforts to save the lost children. We stretch our hands westward and grasp yours, joying to feel the great pulse of the Badger State throbbing in unison not only, but equal in strength, with the Empire State, in the great divine mission of christianizing our youth by means of the Sabbath School. Go on, brethren, our sympathies and prayers are yours.

Very respectfully and cordially,
J. H. BURTIS.

After which the convention sung a hymn, and adjourned till 8 o'clock in the evening.

WALKER HOUSE, MILWAUKEE.—We took the opportunity, the other day, of looking through this institution since it has been remodeled under the auspices of Col BENTLY Those formerly acquainted with the Walker House would hardly know it in its new arrangements. The main floor is on the second story, and is in every respect conveniently and comfortably arranged. As a landlord, we don't know of a match for the Col, outside of this city. Whoever sits at his table is not imposed upon by such an array of dignity, pomposity, starch and flameddidle that his patience is exhausted before he is furnished with anything to eat We have eaten at the best of tables that Milwaukee papers ever bragged over; but we never got so good a dinner, and such prompt attention as we received at the Walker House. The Col. knows his business and is always about. He don't often leave his guests to the tender mercies of dandy clerks. Racine Journal.

WALL, Esq., northeast corner of Main and Wisconsin streets; or from Mr. JOHN BROUGHTON, at TRUSLOW'S store, 101 East Water street; or from any of the following Committee: R. Rastall, Jas. Rastall. IN REPLY to the virulent attack of the Patriot upon the Governor, accusing His Excellency of being responsible for the Lady Elgin calamity, the Madison Argus (BRECKINRIDGE) replies:

"We disagree on almost every point in politics with Gov. Randall. But he is an estimable and kindly gentleman, who confers more honor upon the office than he receives from it. And we have enough pride in our State and respect for its Chief Executive to repel assaults so unjust and brutal as this."

AMONG THE LOST of the Lady Elgin was Hon. B. F. HALL, Cashier of the Bank of Aurora. He was larger than the average of men, and deeply pitted by the small pox.—He would, however, be more readily recognized by a signet ring, worn on one of his little fingers, marked in German text, J. S. H. Should he be found his brother may be addressed, P. A. HALL, Tremont House, Chicago.

IOWA COUNTY FAIR.—The Fifth Annual Fair of the Iowa County Agricultural Society will be held at Dodgeville, on the 3d, 4th, and 5th of October next. The Directors of the society is a sufficient guarantee that everything will be conducted upon the right principle, and as the Society is a county institution, and the premium list a large one, every citizen of the county should attend and compete for the prizes.

SURGICAL OPERATION.—We learn that on Saturday last, Dr. VAN DUSEN, assisted by Drs. THOMAS, of Arlington, and MONROE, of Fayette, removed an entire breast affected with cancerous enlargement, of a woman sixty-two years old. We understand that the patient bore the operation quite well, considering her age and extremely debilitated condition.

THE FREEMEN OF CEDAR VALLEY.—On the sixth of September the Freemen of Cedar Valley, Iowa, congregated at Cedar Falls in immense numbers. The enthusiasm was unbounded and the Hawkeyes say nothing of the kind was ever seen in that State before. Old ABE will carry everything before him.

GOV. RANDALL delivers the annual address at the County Fair of Sheboygan County, held at Sheboygan Falls, on Thursday next.

DOMESTIC MANUFACTURES.—Among the articles of home manufacture that will be exhibited at our State Fair, is a church organ, which is entered by Cornelius Westhrope, of Menasha, a gentleman over 60 years old. It is manufactured wholly of material grown in Wisconsin, and though the first effort of the builder, is said to be as perfect in tone, and compact as any church organ in the State. It will be offered for sale after the fair.—Janesville Gazette, 15th.

A MAN KILLED.—A man by the name of Thomas Ronke was killed on Saturday night, while lying in a state of intoxication on the railroad track, about a mile west of this city, by the cars passing over him. He was an Irishman, about thirty-five years of age, and was married, but left no children.—Madison Journal.

Book Notice.

LIFE OF WILLIAM T. PORTER. By FRANCIS BRINLEY—D. APPLETON & Co., 443 and 445 Broadway, N. Y.

The perusal of this book has been a rich feast to us. WILLIAM T. PORTER was a brave, true man. There are characteristic letters and anecdotes of DANIEL WEBSTER, GREELEY, HERBERT and others, throughout the volume. One is introduced to a great many gentlemen here, in whose pockets a "dirty shilling" never was. BRINLEY, the author, is a brother-in-law of PORTER, and his information is most reliable. He wields a graphic pen, and writes with great candor. The friends of Mr. PORTER owe his biographer a debt of gratitude for his kindness and devotion.

We cannot forbear introducing a sketch of Mr. PORTER'S early life and training. It is from the pen of his youngest sister, a lady of rare accomplishments and intellectual power, as indeed all of the family are, to a remarkable degree. It is a genuine New England picture:

"During the summer of 1821," writes Mrs. BRINSLEY, "my mother removed to Hanover, having purchased a picturesque old residence which occupied the highest site in the village, a few steps from where the observatory now stands. It was a large, faded, tranquil-looking one-story house, of no especial color, covering a good deal of ground, but mellow with the lapse of time, and changing seasons, and had been originally built for one of the Presidents of the College. The prospect which it commanded, on every side, was of wide-spread character, full of variety and heavenly beauty. Even as children we were never tired of looking at the distant blue line of sky, the far off mountains of the North, the long, low ridge of jagged, rocky hills in the rear, and the great purple and gold summits of Ascutney, now almost within arm's length, which we believed to be a celestial highway to the battlements of God's home. Directly opposite to us, across the river, were our own beloved hills of Vermont—the hills of our birthright, the hills of the setting sun, piled up into the vast heavens, with all their pastures, forests, brooks, clouds, and busy human life.

The village of Hanover was just below us, fresh, compact, and shining as a mosaic, with its venerable college, solemn old church, and cluster of white dwellings in a square setting of young elm trees, which lent a grateful shade to the romantic footpaths round the common. A little removed from the village, on the westerly side, a narrow, beautifully shaded avenue led gently down to the common burying ground. It was the genuine New England stamp; its monumental tombs and graves abandoned to weeds and nettles and relentless gloom, enclosed by a plain board fence, stained with the damps and moulds of time, hemmed in and choked up by the high grass, rank shrubs, and matted ivy which trailed over it. A few stunted trees were scattered here and there, but shrivelled into lifeless skeletons as if unable to resist the inexorable destiny written all about them. The situation of the old burial place, however, was beautiful; upon the verge of a deep gorge between two hills lined with a thick growth of forest trees, overlooking the gently swelling valley, the winding river, and the purple masses of the surrounding hills. At this day the spot has participated in the general spirit of improvement of burial places throughout New England, and is not only embosomed soft in trees, but includes within its limits the wooded gorge which already enshrines within its shaded depths the sleeping dust of inestimable worth and virtue.

THE OLD PEDAGOGUE.

"On my mother's arrival at Hanover, no time was lost in placing her four youngest children, WILLIAM, (the subject of this memoir) GEORGE, FRANK and myself, at the prominent school of the town, which was then connected with Dartmouth College, the President of the college being ex officio President of the academy. This school house was originally established for the education of Indian youths, and the corporate name was 'MOORE'S Indian Charity School,' but for many years it had been open to pupils of both sexes, on payment of a small tuition fee. The Dominie, ARCHELAUS F. PUTNAM, (Scholar Moorensii's Preceptor, as appears in Dartmouth College catalogue,) presided over the destinies of that institution, only known to me and the rest of his pupils by the familiar name of 'OLD PUT.' I never knew from what part of the zodiac he radiated, who gave him faith, who taught him Greek and Latin, whether he was or was not the name-sake of the lineal descendant of the second son of the Judean governor, who was driven out of his dominions for his cruelty; whether he was Orthodox, or Heterodox; whether he believed in Simon Magus, who prescribed lively bodily mortification from a notion that it had a happy influence in enlarging the mind, or sided with HIERAX, who regarded children, 'till the age of reason,' as outcasts from Heaven, and to be treated as young rebels and sinners; or sympathized with that sect which sprung up in Italy in 1260, taking their name from the Latin flagello, and maintaining stoutly that a brisk application of the whip on the shoulders, was of equal virtue with the Sacraments; but of the personal appearance of the Dominie, I have a distinct impression. He was an emaciated, narrow-chested man, above the medium height, with a pale, rigid face—eyes inexorable and full of danger, though chafed into a sick and pale dimness, with a mouth that vibrated betwixt a snappish irritability, and an evident attempt to appear undisturbed, and, at times, even jocular.

With the utmost diligence in our studies, and the closest observance of the rules of the school, it was impossible to escape the humiliating blows of a mahogany ruler, which to day by capricious humor from day carried upon the bent of his ... ered persons hammerings of our sabbaths, that in times threatened to break down the stoutest heart amongst us.

Instinct and intellect, however, were quickened by its lightning strokes down to their sacred springs of inspiration, and vigorous progress was the result in every department. The very atmospheres of old Dartmouth, at that period, communicated a sturdy emulation in both parents and children. Scholarship was the all-in-all creed of the day. Infants were expected to lisp Greek before the appearances of their first tooth—the very air was said to be freighted with Lydian lyrics, and precedents of rare excellence among the graduates of the college, were forever kept before the eyes of the old and young. The whole country was ringing with the fame of WEBSTER, and the every day presence of Mr. CHOATE, then a tutor in the rich bloom of his personal beauty, with a reputation more circumscribed, but not more commanding, within the sphere of display than the fame that surrounded him at the day of his death, gave impulse and courage to every young ambitious spirit within the sound of the college or academy bell.

During these years of unfledging industry, WILLIAM made great progress in his studies and though often detected with a volume of DE FOE, or the "Complete Angler," within the leaves of his Virgil, he was considered "up to his work" in Greek and Latin, and ranked high as scholar.

THE PRINTER BOY.

But "Old Put's" and Mahogany Ruler seems to have had its legitimate effect, by making school hateful to WILLIAM, the generous, hopeful boy, being then an orphan, and having read the life of FRANKLIN, determined not to enter college, but go into a printing office and work his way to eminence over the "cases," which, by the way, are the best kind of ladders, sometimes. His mother was very anxious to have him complete his studies at Dartmouth, but he was determined; and so he went into an office in Andover, where they printed so many bills, tracts and other religious works, that the children looked up to the office with as much awe as Moses did upon the mountain where he got the Commandments.

At the age of twenty, WILLIAM was the editor of a paper in St. Johnsbury, Vermont. At the age of twenty-three he starts the New York Spirit of the Times. HORACE GREELEY writes: "At the last end of this year (1831,) he (WILLIAM T. PORTER) and JAMES HOW, another young printer, devised the Spirit of the Times, a weekly paper, which they brought out on the 1st of January, 1832. I worked for them from the outset, and remember getting the first number to press a little after midnight of December 31, 1831, January 1, 1832."

This paper, as all our readers know, was a success. His patience, his struggles, and triumphs through more than a quarter of a century, cannot be read without admiration. Mr. PORTER drew the attention of the public to stock raising, and especially to the improvement in blood horses. He almost created the race course; he certainly made it respectable, and his arguments in favor of turf sports are unanswerable. The course was not to him a place for gambling, but a mere show-ground, where men could see the very best "blood" and be instigated to not tolerate scabby crow-baits on their farms, but get the best "bloods,"—such as we read of in the Bible: "His nostrils are wide, and he paweth the earth."

ANGLING.

He indulged in the highest style of the art. He was a Trouter by instinct, and all else follows that. He says: "Of all sports ever sported commend me to angling. It is the nicest, virtuousest, discreetest, best; the safest, cheapest, and, in all likelihood, the oldest of pastimes. It is a one-handed game that would have suited ADAM himself; it was the only one by which NOAH could have amused himself in the Ark. Hunting and shooting come in second and third. The common phrase, "Fish, flesh and fowl" hints clearly at this order of precedence. To refer to my own experience, I certainly became acquainted with the angling rod next after the birchen one, and long before I had any practical knowledge of 'Nimrod' or 'Rameed.'"

"The truth is, angling comes by nature.—It is in the system, as the doctors say. Plenty of children are born with water in the head; but whoever heard of a boy coming into the world with gunpowder on the brain, or tops and feathers on his legs."

Thus discourseth, in praise of angling, that "hiever dogge and phunne poette, TOM HOOD;" and here follows thirty pages containing the very cream of his observations, and hints on fishing, well worth the price of the volume, even if the reader should never "get a hook."

The fifth chapter contains a description of the race between "Wagoner" and "Gray Eagle," which "Frank Forester," a veteran sportsman and author, pronounces the most vivid and graphic piece of turf writing on record.

The volume contains a record of the great races, the time made, the pedigree of celebrated horses, and other matters of interest to stock growers in that line, and a fine steel plate portrait of PORTER from a portrait by his friend INMAN, the artist.

Terrible Railroad Accident.

We are again called upon to chronicle a murderous accident upon one of our public highways, by which the lives of a number of people have been sacrificed, and a still larger number wounded and maimed. We learn from S. S. Eddy, of this city, that the passenger train which arrived at Delevan last night about half-past seven from Elkhorn, was run into by a freight train, and five persons instantly killed and twenty or thirty wounded. Of the latter it was supposed that several would die.

The train which was wrecked consisted of a locomotive, baggage car, two passenger cars and a wood car. It was a regular train, carrying passengers from the Walworth County Fair, which had been held at Elkhorn that day, to the villages along the Racine road as far as Beloit. Mr. Eddy says the train was running quite fast, after leaving Elkhorn, and that the conductor said there was a freight train behind, and he was keeping out of its way.

Upon arriving at the village of Delevan, the train was stopped to get water, about 20 rods from the depot. They had not been there more than a minute before the freight train from Elkhorn came round the curve in the road, which is rather sharp at this point, and ran into the passenger train. The wood car platform was crowded with men and boys, but they fortunately had time to jump from it and save themselves. The wood car was then driven forward into the rear passenger car, clear through it, and a portion of it penetrated the passenger car beyond. In it passage it just cleared the floor and swept every seat, with their occupants, all who stood up and crowded the passage, the sides and top of the car and piled the wreck into the space between the cars and upon the rear of the next passenger car ahead. Upon the top of this wreck the wood car reared itself with its wheels, and the wheels of the passenger car which had been demolished. Underneath all this were some seventy-five or eighty human beings—some killed instantly, others wounded to death, and still others writhing in agony caused by horrible injuries. Our informant says it was an awful sight.

So closely were the materials of the demolished cars jammed together, that it was a half an hour before the wreck could be cleared, so that the people could be got out. When this could be done five persons were found dead, viz:

Mrs. Davis, Allen's Grove.
A boy ten years old
Another boy somewhat older.
A woman about 28 years old.
A man about 35 years old.

There were between twenty and thirty persons more or less wounded, some eight or ten of whom it is supposed would die. The only wonder is that more persons were not killed.

Our informant did not, in the confusion which occurred, learn the names of the killed and wounded, except that of Mrs. Davis before spoken of as dead, and a Mr. [illegible] son; of Johnstown Center, who [illegible] leg were fractured, and [illegible] skull and to be mortally injured. [illegible] who was supposed [illegible] injured.

It is evident that there has, in this instance, been a wholesale slaughter of human life, caused by the recklessness of those having these trains in charge. It would seem that the most ordinary care and precaution would, under the circumstances, have saved this dreadful sacrifice. We trust that the guilty parties, whoever they were, will receive the punishment which such culpable carelessness deserves. Until we obtain further information, we do not feel disposed to say who the persons are who should be condemned. We understand that the conductor of the passenger train says that he left word at Elkhorn that the freight train should be delayed. If this is so, either the direction was not attended to, or the conductor of the freight train did not obey instructions.—Janesville Gazette, 15th.

The New York Confusion.

In regard to the last political speculation in New York, the Philadelphia North American says:

"We know already that tens of thousands of life-long Democrats have abandoned the name and party in disgust at the recent proceedings. When they saw bargains made at the sacrifice of every professed principle, they did not need other evidence to convince them how unscrupulous were the means employed to achieve success. This last exhibition can only be characterized as infamous, because if we may believe the parties to the bargain, neither side is fit to be trusted where confidence is needed, or bullion is to be handled. So far from calling out a larger vote for the unholy coalition, we firmly believe it will drive off many thousands, who do not intend to be sold by huckstering demagogues. The masses will rise up and rebuke this mercenary management, by an expression which will astound the traders who are engaged in it. The first combination with Hunt, Duer & Co., lost Mr. Douglas a large support which can never be regained. The last contrivance will offend a still greater interest, by the flagrant and bold disregard of all integrity and decency. We consider that Mr. Lincoln has gained by these jobbing experiments a moral force in that State which will add many thousands of votes to his certain majority. There never was the shadow of a doubt about New York, and we are glad there is a prospect at last, by which all the factions, and remnants, and professional operators may be combined together with their pie-bald colors and principles, in order to prove to the country, once for all, that the miserable demagogues who have claimed a balance of power, so as to have something for sale at election times, are without any real influence, and are as much deficient in numbers as they are destitute of integrity. As it is, we shall have a sweeping majority over the aggregate votes of the three factions in New York—enough to settle decisively for many years to come the political complexion of that State, and to extinguish the charlatans who have aspired to its control for the most selfish and unworthy purposes."

SAVED! SAVED!

Physicians in vain came again and again,
The dear little angel grew worse.
"'Tis a fatal disease, and we can't give her ease!"
Said the doctors to mother and nurse.

And a cure pointed out right away:
BRYAN'S VERMIFUGE mild, then they gave to the child,
And behold! she was well in a day.

Judson's Mountain Herb Pills.

HOW STRANGE AND WONDERFUL It often seems to us that a medicine composed of simple mountain herbs and roots, should so certainly search out and cure disease. How surprising that the Indians should know and preserve so long and well a secret that has escaped the search of the greatest physicians the world has ever seen. True, the ancient inhabitants of Mexico were a strange race, found by the Spaniards living in large cities, and allowing for their strange customs and religion as well civilized as their conquerors. In the words of a writer of some celebrity, "They have perished from the earth, their cities like gigantic piles of ruins, their Kings and Princes so mighty in their life, are forgotten: their ruins and their medicine alone are left." The united testimony of all intelligent persons is that JUDSON'S MOUNTAIN HERB PILLS are the most successful medicine in the world in curing diseases.

Sold by all Medicine Dealers.

IN THE WOODS.

I walked alone in the depths of autumn woods;
The ruthless winds had left the maple bare;
The fern was withered and the sweet briar's breath
No longer gave its fragrance to the air.

The barberry strung its coral beads no more;
The thistle-down on gaudy wings had flown;
And crapsied leaves, on which the Summer wrote
Her blushing farewell, at my feet were strown.

A loneliness pervaded every spot;
A gloom of which my musing soul partook;
All Nature mourned, I said: November with
Hath torn the fairest pages from her book.

But suddenly a wild bird overhead
Poured forth a strain so strangely clear and sweet,
It seemed to bring me back the tides of May,
And wake the sleeping violets at my feet.

Then long I pondered o'er the poet's words,
"The loss of beauty is not always loss,"
Till like the voice of love they soothed my pain,
And gave me strength to bear again my cross.

O murmuring heart! thy pleasure may decay,
Thy faith grow cold, thy golden dreams take wing;
Still in the realm of faded youth and joy,
Heaven kindly leaves some bird of hope to sing.

TEE CHILD'S GIFT.

"Pretty little lady," said Pedro, singling out one of the little girls, who, wearied with dancing and running, stood close beside him listening, "will give Pedro a little piece of bread?"

"Let's give him his dinner!" said the child running up to the porch. "Mamma, he wants a piece of bread!"

"Take him round to the kitchen and give him his dinner," said the lady in the porch, kindly.

"Stay, little lady, one little minute. Pedro sing for you."

He placed his hurdy gurdy on a bench, and stood leaning against a tree. The children gathered close around him, and with a beaming smile, Pedro bowed his head and began to sing. His voice was pure and clear, and he sang with feeling. The song was a peasant's song of southern Italy, praising sky, field, and flower, and, impressed, inspired with the scene around him, Pedro sang with his whole heart. The children could not understand the words, but the melody was lively and beautiful, and his "round of applause" was hearty enough to have gratified the hearts of any of his countrymen bowing over the footlights.

"Come again to-morrow. Be sure you come to-morrow," cried his little audience, as he left the ground after a hearty dinner, and a handful of small coins in his pocket.

"Si, si, I come to morrow. Addio, Grazin, Signora." And he bowed gracefully to the lady in the porch, and went his way again over the smooth grass. Towards evening, wearied with his day's walk, he sat down to rest on the stone steps leading to a large, handsome garden. The sun was sinking slowly below the horizon, and, as his eye fell on the gorgeous western sky, Pedro's thoughts flew over the wide sea to Italy. He thought of the little cottage where, the petted child of poor but indulgent parents, he had watched many such sunsets, for, from his infancy, the boy had been a lover of nature. Then his mother's death, the long sea voyage, his mother's funeral at sea, when all that remained for Pedro to love was lowered over the ship's side; all this came back to him, and the large tears hung on his eyelashes as he leaned heavily against the wall.

"Pretty boy, here's a penny."

Pedro turned his head. The speaker was a blue-eyed, fair-haired little girl, and he recognized the child for whom he had played in Broadway the day before.

"Don't cry, pretty boy," said the child, dropping the penny into his hand. "Have a posy, pretty boy?" And she chose one white rose from many flowers that she held in her apron.

Pedro took the little white, chubby hand in his and raised it to his lips, and then, taking up his hat, went forward again.

The penny which the child had given him had a hole in it, and, with a piece of twine, Pedro hung it on his neck, hiding it under the ragged blouse.

A few days later, Pedro was sitting by the bank of a pretty running brook. He was leaning forward over a large piece of rock; his fingers holding a wooden-covered lead-pencil with which he was drawing on an old envelope he had picked up on the road.—The day was Sunday, and his hurdy-gurdy was hanging in a barn, upon the floor of which he had slept for several nights, paying a few pennies to an old farmer for the privilege. Pedro was sketching the face of the child who had given him the white rose. The round, dimpled cheeks, the smiling mouth, short wavy hair, and soft, large eyes were all faithfully transferred to the large white envelope, upon which the the address had left a blank space. As he finished, he raised his sketch and looked at it; a paper fluttered from the envelope and fell at the boy's feet. He took it up. A bank note for five hundred dollars was in his hand—Pedro knew its value, and his heart gave a heavy throb of joy as he thought of the treasure he had found. Then, thirsting aside the unworthy temptation, he looked at the envelope for the address:

MR. GEORGE L. HASTINGS,
Melrose, N. Y.

Melrose! He was in Melrose, and could easily find out by inquiry where Mr. Hasting's lived. He put the note back into the envelope, thrust his pencil into his pocket, and holding the paper fast in his hand, started for the barn, his only substitute for a home. In the yard, he met the farmer's wife.

"Can you tell me," he said, "where live Mr. George Hastings?"

"Mr. Hastings? He lives about a mile down this road. You walk down there, and anybody can point out the house."

"Grazia!"

Pedro started down the road, feeling a strong anxiety to get the note out of his own hands. The strong temptation to keep it was frightening the boy, and he sped along the road, looking on each side as he passed for some one to direct him to the house. At last, a gentlemen passed in a carriage, and Pedro put the question to him.

"There," he said, pointing to a hon se; "that is Mr. Hasting's house."

Pedro bowed and smiled. He felt willing enough to seek that house, for it was there that he had dined on his first arrival in Melrose, and played to the pretty fairies on the lawn.

He rang the bell, and in another moment a man opened the door.

"Is Mr. Hastings live here?"

"Yes."

"I want see him."

"You?" said the man contemptuously;—"you?"

"I want see him," said the boy again.

"What do you want?"

"I want to see Mr. Hastings. Tell him I here."

"What is it, John?" said a little girl, coming into the entry. "O, Pedro!"

"I want to see Mr. Hastings, Signorina."

"Papa? Well, come with me."

Pedro followed her into the library. A tall, handsome man, with gray hair and mild blue eyes, was reading there.

"Papa," said the little girl, "here is Pedro, our Italian boy, wants to see you."

"Well, my lad, said the gentleman, "what is it?"

"You lose five hundred dollars bill?" said Pedro.

"Yes, on the road, in an envelope," said the gentleman. "I drew it out with some some other papers, and dropped it, I presume. Have you found it?"

"Si, Signor, that him."

And he laid the envelope upon the table near which Mr. Hastings was seated.

"Do you know the value of this? what it would buy?" inquired Mr. Hastings.

Pedro nodded.

"Buy papers, pencils, pictures, many, great deal; buy shoes, coat, hat, many, great deal."

And the boy laughed, as he looked at his own bare feet.

"Papers, pencils—Ha! what is this?" And Mr. Hastings took up the envelope. "Did you draw that?" And he pointed to the head of the child.

"Why, papa, that is Carrie Conway, the little girl who lives up the road, in the house with the stone wall round the garden."

"Si, Signorina," cried Pedro, delighted to have his picture recognized. "Stone wall, stone steps. Pedro cry for Italia! Little lady angel give Pedro this." And he displayed his penny.

Mr. Hastings was closely examining the sketch upon the envelope. Although not professionally an artist, Mr. Hastings was a true connoisseur, and could paint with much taste and some skill. He read genius in every line of the sketch before him. Turning to the lad, he addressed him in his own musical Italian:

"You drew this head?"

"Yes."

"Should you like to study painting?"

The boy's eyes glowed, his cheek burned, as clasping his hands together, he said:—"Ah, that would be heaven!"

With a few skillful questions, Mr. Hastings drew from the lad the whole of his simple history; and, as he looked on the handsome, intelligent face, lit with large eyes through which genius shone, he could not reconcile the face and manner with the life of a roving hurdy-gurdy boy.

"You have returned to me this money, which I had thought lost entirely," said Mr. Hastings. "I shall use it to procure you clothing, and put you in a school in New York. You can repay me when you are a great artist."

My space will not permit me to dwell upon Pedro's school life. His affectionate disposition and unwavering gratitude endeared him more and more to Mr. Hastings, his wife, and the little Lizzie; and, after his graduation from the New York school, Mr. Hastings sent him to Italy to study the art which was his love and delight, growing in his heart deeper with each year of study.

It was fourteen years since Pedro Carnavelli landed in New York for the first time, when again the European steamer landed its passengers on the New York wharf, and again the Italian stepped on American ground—not now a ragged boy, friendless, homeless, and forlorn, but a tall, handsome young man, with a faultless costume, and no sooner off the vessel than amongst friends. Mr. Hastings stood on the wharf, and a young man, Lizzie's husband, for Lizzie had been two years married, stood beside him. Other friends, schoolboy companions, were also there to welcome Mr. Hastings' adopted son, Pedro Carnavelli, back to America.

Melrose again! Pedro leaned far out of the carriage, as they drove from the station. All the well known objects were hailed with delight, by the enthusiastic lover of nature, until they drove up to the door of Mr. Hastings' house, and then came welcomes and embraces from Mrs. Hastings and Lizzie, happy enough to welcome home the wanderer, who was loved like a son and brother by the family of his benefactor.

"No, my lazy friend, you cannot lounge another minute in that chair," said Lizzie, as after dinner, Pedro threw himself into an arm-chair. "You are to be the lion of a ball to-night."

"A ball? Oh, Lizzie, can't I stay here?"

"No, sir. I have promised to bring with me Signor Pedro Carnavelli, whose picture of "Hope" drew the prize this year at the Paris exhibition; whose landscape was purchased by the greatest connoisseur in London, for his private collection, whose fame——"

"Stop! stop! I will go. Even a ball is preferable to such a hail storm of commendation. Who gives this ball, so early in the season?"

"Early? Why, next week begins November. This ball is given by Mrs. Mattison, of Fifth Avenue, who is quite delighted at the prospect of being first to secure you. She has sent me an invitation for you before the steamer had been in an hour. We go to the St. Nicholas from here, dress there and return there after the ball till to-morrow.—Come! it is late now to be just starting."

"Well if I must I must, Mrs Wayne.—Harry pity me."

"Pity you! Why, my dear fellow, ever since the last picture you sent over has been on exhibition, you have been the rage. You will be the lion of this season."

"Harry! Pedro! go get ready to start," said the imperative Lizzie, shaking back her dark curls, and chasing her husband fairly out of the room.

ARRIVAL OF THE EUROPA.

GARIBALDI ADVANCING ON NAPLES!

THE KING FLEES FOR SAFETY!

ST. JOHNS, N. B., Sept. 18—3 P. M.

The Royal steamship Europa, from Liverpool on Saturday the 8th inst., via Queenstown the 9th, passed Cape Race at half-past seven Sunday evening.

She was boarded by the news yacht of the associated press, and the following summary of her news obtained:

The King of Naples quitted the Capital on a Spanish vessel, for Gaeta.

Garibaldi was at Cava, 26 miles from Naples, on the 6th. He was expected to reach the Capital on the 7th. His advanced guards were at Salermo on the 8th.

Naples continued quiet.

LIVERPOOL COTTON MARKET.—The sales Saturday were 12,000 bales, including 5,000 bales on speculation for export; market closed firm.

The breadstuff market was paralyzed on Friday, and quotations were nominal; but a few sales were made at the following reduction on the week: flour 2s3d; wheat 9d; corn 1s6d. On Saturday the market was dull and quotations nominal.

The harvest in England was making satisfactory progress.

The Opinoine National of Turin, of the 8th, says the first volume of volunteers entered the march to-day.

Douglas Arrived at Syracuse.

SYRACUSE, Sept. 18—3 P. M.

Douglas arrived here yesterday from Clifton Springs; upon his arrival and during the day he has been in reception of honors. His speech embraced some new arguments and points not before touched by him. He explained that the difference between popular sovereignty and squatter sovereignty was, that squatter sovereignty is outside the constitution and in rebellion against the federal government, while popular sovereignty is inside the constitution and in obedience to the federal authority.

In answer to Republicans he stated that Jefferson was Minister to France when the ordinance of 1787 was adopted, and knew nothing about it until afterwards, and that Jefferson's plan for the government of territories, which was adopted in 1786, was the fullest recognition of the rights of Republican sover-ignty

Currency is in good supply, the demand during the last three days having been comparatively trifling.

CHICAGO MONEY MARKET.

The Press & Tribune of this morning says:

The exchange market is rather close at regular quotations, viz: ¾ per cent premium

Outside the banks there is very little good paper offering. Discount rates among the note brokers range from 1@2½ per cent per month. The latter is an outside figure. About 1@1¼ are the ruling rates, though very little paper finds its way to the street on any terms.

It will be seen that there is a heavy falling off in receipts of wheat to-day, the deliveries by all the railroads amounting to only 59,301 bus, against 83,388 yesterday. The market was very dull, sellers encouraged by the light receipts selling reluctantly at the decline of yesterday. The sales reported are inside of 50,000 bus, at 98@98c for No. 1 spring in store; 92@93 for No. 2 in store; 95@99c for Club, and 90a for Extra delivered—the market closing at the inside figures. Until the New York report was received very few sales were made. After that sellers were more anxious to realize.

There was a moderate enquiry for flour at the reduced prices, but not much offered. We note sales of a few hundred bbls at $4.60@4.75 for fair to good Spring Extra brands.

The supply of coarse grains continues barely sufficient to supply the local demand, and all descriptions are consequently firm at full prices.

We heard of no freight engagements. Vessels were offered at 1½c for wheat to Buffalo, but shippers refused to pay more than 1½c. A large fleet is daily expected both here and at Chicago, and under the present state of affairs it does not look as if the extravagant anticipations of vessel owners were going to be fully realized.

In reference to the market the Press & Tribune says:

The wheat market, which opened steady, but came immediately depressed after the receipt of the Jura's news, and gradually weakened as the afternoon dispatches come in—closing 2@3c lower than Saturday. About 100,000 bus were sold at 94@96c for No. 1 spring; 92@93c for No. 2 do, and 90@92c for rejected. Winter wheat quiet, with sales of small lots at 96c for No. 1 red, and 70c for No. 2 do. The flour market was dull and about 10c lower, with limited sales at $4,60@5,05 for medium to choice extra. Corn in good request, with a moderate demand, but closed rather heavy, with sales of about 80,000 bus, at 37¾c for No 2 canal afloat; 36½@37c for No. 1 in store; 36@36¼c for No. 2 in store. The Gazette of Monday morning has the following report of Saturday's market:

FLOUR—A dull and heavy market, and prices merely nominal. Holders seemed unwilling to make any concessions of importance, but buyers content for a free offine of 10@15c. The sales were confined to three small lots, at $5 for good superfine, and $5,10@6 for fancy brands.

THE HOG TRADE.

From the St. Louis Democrat of Saturday:

There was a sale of 600 head made to-day, at $5,00 net, to be delivered by the 20th of November, the purchase time. Nearly half the purchase money was paid in advance without interest.

In the country, at various points, our traders are buying at about $5,25 net. At Kentucky, we also learn, Mr. Godman, has bought 21,000 head, and in all some 35,000 have been contracted for, deliverable at that point, at $5 to $5,25 net. Most of these were bought in the line of the Louisville & Nashville road.

It is estimated that 75,000 to 100,000 head will this year be packed at Keokuk, against 50,000 last year. At Burlington 15,000 head have been purchased at about the same rate as at Keokuk, $5,75@5,85 net. It is estimated by competent parties that the hog trade of the West will reach the value of $85,000,000 this year. The whole produce our ces or shipments of the West will reach hundreds of millions this season.

The Cincinnati Commercial, of the 15th, says:

Hogs are offered, and some contracts have been made, at the seven figures heretofore quoted as about the standard—$5,50—the modifications made are in regard to the delivery, more than in the price. Several thousand head were said to have been disposed of to-day, comprising both December and November delivery. Some extra heavy were sold. The prices were not divulged.

RAILWAY MATTERS.

TALK OF A RAILROAD FROM BERLIN TO WAUTOMA.

The Waushara Republican says that a good deal of talk is exchanged on the topic of building a railroad from Berlin, the present terminus of the Milwaukee & Horicon R Broad, to Wautoma. It is said that the road could be made to pay, and that it could be graded and the ties put down for $2000 per mile.

It is proposed to adopt the plan pursued on the Oshkosh & Wautoma road. The people build the road ready for the iron, and then make arrangements with a railroad company to furnish the rolling stock, iron, etc., and operate it.

The Republican says that many of the citizens of that vicinity would give outright from $500 to $1,000 each to build the road, and has no doubt but ten or fifteen thousand dollars in stock would be willingly taken by the people of Wautoma alone.

As to the question whether it would pay, the Repub. lican says:

See what it now costs to transport your wheat from here to Berlin. At least ten cents ₱ bushel. Now if your wheat was shipped directly to Milwaukee, the difference in price of transportation between this point and Berlin would not exceed that the outside three cents per bushel, a saving of seven cents ₱ bus; and estimating the surplus crop of this county this year at 250,000 bus, there would be a clear saving to you, on wheat alone, this year, of over $17,000.

When, then, has witnessed the amount of energying that is now done between this point and Berlin, doubts that a railroad would not pay. Who that looks at the world of produce that must be moved out of this country, will doubt in regard to the matter.

A large portion of the upper country naturally finds an outlet through here to Eastern markets. The Pineries are beginning to liven up. Activity is succeeding lethargy. They will soon demand better facilities for trade, a better outlet.

THE WARSAW RAILROAD.

One of the papers of that section gives the following account of the progress of the Warsaw Railroad:

The work has re-commenced on this road with vigor. The road is established now, and the work is to go on with redoubled energy on it is finally completed. The $15,000 in bonds, upon Neenah, having been negotiated at a high figure, will make a sure thing upon that end of the route; and upon this end there surely can be no doubt when we see one million bushels of different kinds of grain waiting for shipment—an amount adequate to pay the entire expense of building the road, over and above what the crop will sell for on the line of road. The public will not sleep, when they are conscious that the sleep is death." The people are watching and will do the work.

HEAVY BUSINESS ON THE N. Y. ROADS.

The New York Central and New York and Erie railroads have now actually a larger freight business than they have means to do. Commenting upon the recent advance in freights on these roads, the St. Louis Democrat says:

The immense business of the Northwest is this year virtually a monopoly in the hands of the New York Central and New York and Erie, and their roads are understood to be pushed to their full capacity. In this view rates have been steadily advanced since the 25th ult., on 3, 4 and 5 class freights, from Lake ports to New York and Boston. On that day the rate on fourth class, from lake ports was as follows:

	Fourth Class.	Flour ₱ bbl.
To New York	37	45
To Boston	45	90

On the 10th, the rates were advanced from New York to 40 and 80c, and Boston to 47 and 90c. Yesterday a circular was received, giving further advance from lake ports, which has already gone into effect:

	4th class.	Flour ₱ bbl.
From lake ports to New York..	48	95
" Boston	50	100

The above are understood to be arbitrary rates for the points named, and will give a considerable amount of freight to the Pennsylvania Central and Baltimore and Ohio, the St. Louis and cheapest, as the latter roads pay rate on the Saratoga tariff, which allows something of a margin below the New York Central and New York and Erie figures. The Grand Trunk also pay rates of that tariff. It would seem that the roads above named are justified in their action by the heavy calls on their capacity, now demanded by the shippers East and West.
